WASHINGTON, DC –

Ken Gear, CEO of Leading Builders of American made the following statement regarding the US Senate vote to confirm William Pulte as Director of FHFA.

“Leading Builders of America, and the nation’s leading homebuilders, congratulate William Pulte on his appointment as the next Director of Federal Housing Finance Agency. The US housing market is facing historic home affordability challenges and we applaud President Trump for prioritizing housing as evidenced by his day-one Executive Order on housing supply and his appointment of Director Pulte.

As the primary regulator of the US housing finance system, the Federal Housing Finance Agency is responsible for ensuring that homebuyers have access to a stable, liquid and affordable mortgage market. Preserving a robust and fiscally sound housing finance system is of paramount importance to families across America as well as the US economy. We look forward to working with President Trump and Director Pulte to address American’s housing supply shortfall. Working together, we can build more homes and tackle the housing affordability problem facing American families.”
